ried Mary Sessions in the fall of 1871 in the Salt Lake Endowment House. Mary died in 1880 and William died March 28, 1923.

William Henry Oaks came to Utah with his parents, Hyrum and Sarah Woods Oaks, in 1852, settling at what is now American Fork. They later moved to a farm near Provo City for two years before coming to Heber Valley and later moving to a homestead at the mouth of Daniels Canyon.

He helped many times to drive back the Indians, who gave the settlers so much trouble. William was a Blackhawk War veteran and was drawing a pension at the time of his death for services he rendered during that time.

William and Mary Sessions had three children, two boys and a girl. His wife died in 1880 and the children all preceded him in death.

He was of a pioneering disposition, spending much time in the mountains. There probably is no other man in the West who has killed more bears than did he, and it mostly was all done before the days of the modern breech loading rifles came into use.

He left Wasatch County with his father and two brothers to go into the lumbering business in which he was active for 10 years, then engaging in farming a number of years. He lived with his nephew, Ed L. Oaks, his last years, and stated in his last illness he had never had a doctor called to aid him before.
